

From: Art
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/25/02 3:10pm
Subject: Microsoft settlement...

Didn't Netscape give away its browser in order to insure there would be no competition arise to compete with its' product? If that's not anti-competetive, what is? If Microsoft with its' deep pockets hadn't come along there'd have been no incentive for improvements to Netscape and no Microsoft browser alternative. And Netscape has no damage because its' browser product was being given away free. Microsoft should demand a set-off from Netscape because the growing popularity of IE reduced the financial damage Netscape was inflicting on itself by giving its'loser browser product away.

Art Krannawitter
135 Camino del Sol
Vallejo, Ca 94591

707-557-5909